optical illusions are visually perceived objects and images that differ from reality browse our 100 different illusion images and videos can you tell what s on a man s mind this famous optical illusion has become identified as pop culture and is available as poster art the psychological connotations are very evident the fact that when you look at this illusion how do the two purple lines act are they straight or do they bend because we are drawn to the centre of the image with the black dot the purple lines appear to curve stare at the image and see if you can work out the triangle the cubes have been projected as 3d objects very effectively here and colour has been used to trick us into seeing the triangle change try covering your right eye and looking at the black and white star now move your head slowly towards the screen and eventually the coloured star on the left will magically vanish blind spots are to do which can you see in this optical illusion a duck or a bunny perhaps you can see both simultaneously the duck is facing one way with its bill slightly open the bill is also the bunny s a straight pole drives through the centre of the object yet the two diamonds do not act the way we expect them to are they behind each other or side by side colour is important and is often used in rather than being mistakes of our visual interpretation optical illusions such as these are clever design changes on the part of the artist we cannot make sense of the elephant s legs in this simple line can you spot all three faces in this illusion this is an example of a simple image that uses line drawings one of the faces is turning away and appears to be a girl in profile to the left of the image this type of optical illusion is very popular because it is a real puzzle for the brain can you see the cube and its structure clearly our brains tell us that the cube does not act like a cube because the front
